He then added that [illegible] it appeared [illegible] and that his proceedings were [illegible] he would willingly submit to the [illegible] hoping that his property would be [illegible]ed. Upon this representation, which was proved to be substantially true, the following terms were digested, and were submitted to and signed [illegible]

The armed Schooner, Cleopatra, now lying in the harbour of Newport, under process, pending before the District Court for Rhode-Island District, for a breach of the Act of Congress, June 5th, 1794, entitled, "An Act, in addition to the Act, for the Punishment of certain Crimes against the United States," shall be entirely dismantled of her guns, gun-carriages, swivels, small-arms, and of all equipments and preparations of a warlike character, and of all munitions of war of every description—and when thus dismantled, shall, in that condition, be at liberty to depart.

All American citizens, who may compose part of the present crew of said Schooner, and who may require to be dismissed, shall be accordingly dismissed forthwith.

These stipulations shall be strictly and faithfully executed, by the claimant of said Schooner, or by his Agent before the twenty-sixth day of November instant, under the inspection, and to the satisfaction, of Asher Robbins, Esq. District Attorney, and of B. Hazard, Esq. the prosecutor.—And all articles taken out of said Schooner, shall be placed in a Store in Newport, and remain under the controul of said Robbins and Hazard, until five days after said vessel shall sail, unless previously and bona fide sold.

All costs, charges, and expences, of the prosecutions against said vessel, and against her Commander, Francis Chatmon, shall be paid down by the claimant.

All this being performed, the prosecution against said Chatmon shall be discontinued without costs, and a decree of restoration of said Schooner without costs be passed.

Providence, Nov. 17th, 1813.

The foregoing arrangement is hereby agreed to by us.

A [illegible] NA- [illegible] SPANISH LANGUAGE in the Spanish [illegible] by Don Manuel [illegible] and A. Neuman, Professors of [illegible]

The authors of the publication of the [illegible] of Neuman of the Spanish Language [illegible] of the Americans, [illegible] the English Language for the use of the Spaniards, beg leave to observe, that besides the essential benefit derived by producing a facility of intercourse, through the medium of language, between two powerful neighbouring nations, this edition has been [illegible] rendered, as the late Regulations of the Royal Academy of Madrid with regard to the Orthography and Prosodical Accent have been strictly followed. To Merchants and Captains of vessels, in particular, this production will be of infinite service, as it contains a system of mercantile correspondence, comprising every circumstance or transaction necessary to be known in the trading world.

[☞ By the aid of the above valuable Work, an American can learn the Spanish Language, and a Spaniard can make himself acquainted with the English language, in a few months.]

DOMESTIC ROVING AND SPINNING MACHINE.

THE subscribers have purchased the patent right of building, vending, and using the above Machine, in the counties of Newport and Bristol, R. I.—Its most important advantages and usefulness may be [illegible] in a few words:—

First.—It possesses the principle of [illegible] in spinning the Merino [illegible] other wool [illegible] machine, with great [illegible] and [illegible] facility.

Second.—It will spin the common wool [illegible] from the roll without roping, sufficiently fine for common broadcloths. [illegible]

Third.—It will spin cotton, when roped properly carded, as fine and even as on the common wheel, with equally increased advantage.

Fourth.—It is very convenient for doubling and twisting threads, cotton or yarn, of all descriptions with astonishing [illegible]

Fifth.—Its operation [illegible] as the English Jenny, and is [illegible] managed by girls or children, [illegible]

Sixth.—It will produce a saving, over the common wheel, of from 20 to 30 dollars, in the manufacture of every hundred yards of cloth.

Seventh.—It supersedes the great expense of the two English machines, as it performs the same operations of the Billy and Jenny.

Let these facts be duly considered, by [illegible] and liberal minds, together with the saving of time, labour, expense, and the expense of board and wages, [illegible] will perform the service of five or six, in the usual method of spinning, and but few will hesitate in procuring the Domestic Rover and Spinner.—It will also give a powerful spring to enterprise, and stimulate the female part of the community, to vie with each other in habits of industry, as with 20 or 30 spindles an active girl will furnish yarn sufficient to keep 2 or 3 looms constantly in operation, and earn from 20 to 30 dollars per week.

It may be observed, that one of the above machines occupy but little more space than a common bed, and can be removed with ease.—Let every Farmer encourage the growth of Sheep, and promote American Manufactures.—Let the splendid habitation, as well as the humble cottage, become a little factory; and in this way, our country will become truly independent.—If individuals do not [illegible] neighbourhoods join in the purchase of a machine, and the expense will be trifling.

Ladies and Gentlemen are invited to call at No. 5, [illegible], and examine to their own satisfaction; and those who may wish to purchase machines, for the ensuing season, are requested to make early application.

Satisfactory certificates may be seen, and every information given, by application to the subscribers.

Good and warranted machines, of any number of spindles required, will be furnished on short notice, and information given in spinning, on reasonable terms, by applying to

STEPHEN B. CORNELL, of Portsmouth, or

PAUL BAILEY, of Newport.

... proportion to pay, when they were called on to make a larger appropriation; the [illegible] supposed that it was the duty of the committee of ways and means to have given the house information relative to the annual report of the [illegible] having made, when they called for so large an appropriation.

The blank was filled agreeably to the [illegible], and the committee rose and reported the bill, which was engrossed and ordered to be read a third time today.

Wednesday, Jan. 5.

A bill was reported to establish a uniform mode of electing Senators and Representatives.

The partial appropriation bill was read a third time. Mr. Pitkin moved that it should be laid on the table till the law was complied with as to submitting estimates to Congress at the commencement of a session. Mr. Grosvenor seconded the motion. Mr. [illegible] supported it. Mr. Cheves said he should give a reluctant vote for the bill, as the estimates were not before House. The motion to postpone was negatived—yeas 57, nays 101.

A motion was made that the Attorney General of the United States should reside at the seat of Government, when Congress was sitting. The office appears almost a sinecure.

A bill to amend the Direct Tax was reported. The object is to [illegible] more time to State Legislatures to [illegible] the Tax. Mr. Robinson of Louisiana said it would be impossible there to get proper persons to accept the office either of assessor or collector, from the extent of territory, and the smallness of compensation. The tax must be obtained from the Legislature.

Amy Darden again petitioned for compensation for her husband's horse.

The bill appropriating 1,500,000 dollars for the military service, was read a third time and passed.

Mr. Murfree, of North-Carolina, introduced a resolution instructing the committee on Military affairs to enquire into the expediency of providing by law

[illegible]

A resolution, introduced by Mr. [illegible], for a committee to enquire into the expediency of [illegible] and [illegible].

The remaining part of the day has been [illegible] again discussing a bill, introduced by the committee of ways and means, for making partial appropriations;—as it went from the House of Representatives, the appropriation was about $ 4,500,000 for the war department. The House not having been furnished yet with the annual report of the Secretary of the Treasury, which is required by law, or with any estimate for what the money is wanted, much opposition was made, on these grounds, when it was before the house: it however passed and went to the senate, who concurred, with an amendment, by making an additional appropriation of about $ 1,500,000 more, for the Navy department, without any estimate. The house went into committee of the whole on said amendment, agreed to the same, 76 affirmative, 31 negative, which was reported to the house, and upon question of concurrence, carried by a large majority.—Messrs Pitkin, and Macon, Sheffey, Webster spoke against, and Mr. Eppes, &c. in favor of a concurrence. Mr. Eppes, among other observations, said, he was surprized that gentlemen, who professed to have been in favour of a Navy, especially after their glorious achievements this war, should now oppose an appropriation to defray its expenses. This insinuation was replied to with much spirit and force by several gentlemen; by Messrs. Webster and Sheffey particularly; considering the insinuation as altogether unwarrantable. Mr. Webster said, that it is a matter of history, in the records of this country, who had uniformly, since the adoption of this government, been the friends of the Navy; and under whose fostering hands and care it had flourished—that the opposition to the bill was upon a very different ground, and well-known to the gentleman and the house—that it was upon the principle, that the appropriation was not authorised by the Constitution or the existing laws—that specific estimates of money wanted by any department, were never to be dispensed with.

The house adjourned until Monday.

The senate also adjourned to the same time.

JAMES MADISON.

January 6, 1814.

Lord Castlereagh to the Secretary of State.

Foreign Office, Nov. 4.

Sir—I have the honor to enclose, for the information of the President of the United States, copy of a note which the Britannic Majesty's Ambassador at the Court of St. Petersburg was directed to present to the Russian Government, [illegible]

[illegible] His Lordship having [illegible]

[illegible]

In making this communication, I can assure you that the British government is willing to enter into discussion with the government of America for the conciliatory adjustment of the differences subsisting between the two states, with an earnest desire on their part to bring them to a favorable issue, upon principles of perfect reciprocity not inconsistent with the established maxims of public law, and with the maritime rights of the British empire.

The Admiral commanding the British squadron on the American station will be directed to give the necessary protection to any persons proceeding to Europe, on the part of the government of the United States, in furtherance of this overture; or should the American government have occasion to forward orders to their commission at St. Petersburg, to give the requisite facilities, by cartel or otherwise, to the transmission of the same.

I have the honor to be, with the highest consideration, sir, your most obedient servant.

(Signed) CASTLEREAGH.

[ENCLOSURE ALLUDED TO ABOVE.]

Translation of a Note from Lord Cathcart, to the Count de Nesselrode, dated Toplitz, 1st September, 1813.

The undersigned, Ambassador of his Britannic Majesty to the Emperor of all the Russias, desiring to avail himself of the first occasion to renew the subject respecting America, which was brought into discussion in a conference at the moment of departure from Reichenbach, has the honor to address this Note to his Excellency the Count de Nesselrode.

Although the Prince Regent, for reasons which have been already made known, has not found himself in a situation to accept the Mediation of His Imperial Majesty, for terminating the discussions with the United States of America, His Royal Highness desires, nevertheless, to give effect to the beneficent wishes which His Imperial Majesty has expressed, of seeing the War between Great-Britain and America soon terminated to the mutual satisfaction of the two governments.

With this view, His Royal Highness

[illegible]

My Lord [illegible] of St. Petersburg presented to the Russian government, on the first of September [illegible].

By this communication it appears that his Royal Highness the Prince Regent rejected the Mediation offered by his Imperial Majesty to promote Peace between the United States and Great-Britain; but proposed to treat directly with the United States, at Gottenburg or London, [illegible]

Having laid your Lordship's communication before the President, I am [illegible]

[illegible] the United States and Great-Britain.—As the Emperor of Russia was distinguished for his rectitude and impartiality, and was moreover engaged in a war, as an Ally of England, whereby it was his interest to promote peace between the United States and Great-Britain, the President could not doubt that his Royal Highness the Prince Regent would accept the Mediation, which his Imperial Majesty had offered to them.——It was the confidence with which the high character of the Emperor inspired the President, that induced him, disregarding considerations, which a more cautious policy might have suggested, to accept the overture with promptitude, and to send ministers to St. Petersburgh, to take advantage of it. It would have been very satisfactory to the President, if his Royal Highness the Prince Regent had found it compatible with the views of Great-Britain, to adopt a similar measure; as much delay might have been avoided, in accomplishing an object, which, it is admitted, is of high importance to both nations.

The course proposed as a substitute for negociations at St. Petersburgh, under the auspices of the Emperor of Russia, could not, I must remark to your Lordship, have been required for the purpose of keeping the United States unconnected against Great-Britain, with any affairs of the Continent. There was nothing in the proposed Mediation, tending to such a result.—The terms of the overture indicated the contrary. In offering to bring the parties together, not as an umpire, but as a common friend, to discuss and settle their differences and respective claims, in a manner satisfactory to themselves, His Imperial Majesty shewed the interest which he took, in the welfare of both parties.

Wherever the United States may treat, they will treat with the sincere desire they have repeatedly manifested, of terminating the present contest with Great-Britain, on terms of reciprocity, consistent with the rights of both parties, as sovereign and independent nations, and calculated not only to establish present harmony, but to provide, as far as possible, against future collisions which might interrupt it.

Before giving an answer, to the proposition communicated by your Lordship, to treat with the United States, independently of the Russian Mediation, it would have been agreeable to the President, to have heard from the Plenipotentiaries of the United States, sent to St Petersburgh.—The offer of a Mediation by one power, and the acceptance of it by another, forms a relation between them, the delicacy of which cannot but be felt.—From the known character however of the Emperor, and the benevolent views with which his Mediation was offered, the President cannot doubt, that he will see with satisfaction a concurrence of the United States, in an alternative, which, under existing

More Bad News from the North Western Frontier.

Extract of a letter from Canandaigua, January 2, 1814.

"Information has just reached town by express, that the enemy are 18 miles this side of Lewiston, on the ridge Road, marching towards this place with a force of above 3,000, including Indians. Our force consists only of about 4 or 500 effective men. We are almost destitute of ammunition and guns. Our force is at or after Batavia. We are very much alarmed here for the safety of this village."

Newport,

SATURDAY, Jan 15, 1814.

Mr. Hunter's Remarks.—We copy with much pleasure, from "the Reporter," (a new paper published at Washington) the following remarks, made by Mr. Hunter in the Senate of the U.S. Dec. 30, on the resolution complimentary of Commodore Perry's Victory, introduced by Mr. Gaillard.

Mr. Hunter.—Mr. President, I rejoice, sir, that the honorable gentleman from Louisiana has withdrawn his amendment; and with it, all diversity of opinion in regard to the present resolution. I am sure the honorable chairman of the naval committee will not misunderstand me, when I say I have felt towards him something like envy. His situation is indeed peculiarly fortunate—it has furnished him in a period of no ordinary political difficulty and dissension, to present a proposition to which every mind gives an anticipated assent, and every heart (judging from my own,) swells with instinctive approbation. Tho' I confess, sir, I am fearful of trusting myself with the discussion of a topic at once so grateful and copious as the naval merits and talents of Commodore Perry. From my relative situation in regard to this distinguished man I ought perhaps to be the last to dilate upon his praises. For I have not only in common with you all, the pride and pleasure of calling him fellow countryman in a general sense; but the additional pride and pleasure of being a native of the same state, and, to use our legal and appropriate phrase, a "fellow freeman of the same town."

I know him personally and intimately, and my knowledge of the goodness and [illegible] qualities of his private character [illegible] and [illegible] fame. The [illegible] of his [illegible] would willingly avoid [illegible] which coming from me might be imputed to the partiality of friendship; and a scrupulous respect for those feelings ought perhaps to impose upon me silence or reserve. I am indeed placed in a situation in which I can unaffectedly say, that it is as difficult to speak as to forbear speaking. [illegible] But why should I suppress emotions which as a public man I participate with you all. How can I answer it to my constituents to be seemingly indifferent in a subject upon which they are [illegible] and [illegible] unanimous. Why is it wrong in me to indulge in an honest pride as a citizen of Rhode-Island?—Why should I be so timid as not to assent to the kind but true declaration which the warmth of the present occasion has elicited: that the smallest State in the Union has been the nursery of some of its greatest men.

Sir, While I hold in one hand this resolution, expressive of the gratitude of the nation towards this naval product of Rhode-Island, Hero, for his deliverance of the West, I can point with the other, to the likeness of that illustrious Rhode-Island veteran, (alluding to the likeness of General Greene, in the Senate Chamber) who in the second war of [illegible] of detail, [illegible] conceive, [illegible] the want of [illegible] being attacked, of the means of effectual defence.—An honourable gentleman [from] Pennsylvania, (Mr. Lacock) was [kind] enough to put into my hands, during the last summer, a letter from Erie, describing what the writer deemed the forlorn and hopeless condition, the imminent peril, the apprehended and inevitable destruction of Perry and his [fleet]. To collate on this day that letter, with the present resolution, would be, to pronounce an eulogium indeed; Sir, it would not be proper to do over again, with less ability and effect, what has been so well done by honorable gentlemen who have preceded me; I may, however, be excused, for repeating what the occurrences at Erie, on the illustrious 10th of September, so palpably demonstrate; that naval history cannot furnish an instance, where victory was so peculiarly the consequence of the individual intrepidity and unconquerable fortitude of the Commander.—What decision, what serenity, did he exhibit in the midst of the horrid havoc and carnage of that day! by shifting his flag, when his own ship was no longer defensible; by becoming the daring and skilful assailant, when the enemy thought him, and had a right to think him, conquered; he converted his [impending] defeat, into glorious victory.—[Under] the blessing of Almighty God, he made the enemy's fleet our own.—And how attentive is he, to the fame and merit of those who shared with him the honors of that day. How anxious [illegible] in his own wreath, the names of Yarnall, of Taylor, of Turner, and [illegible] prompt, when [illegible] to [illegible] the well-earned [illegible] of his associates, to equal [illegible] and to do justice to [illegible] worth! How careful was he [in] relieving the wants, and soothing the [illegible] own men! How nobly [did] he re-illustrate the indubitable truth, [that] courage and humanity are inseparable, by his kindness and liberality towards his prostrate foe. How attentive was he to follow up his victory, and [illegible] to fruit; and with what enthusiastic ardor, and, shall I say, with what [illegible] profusion of valour, did he risk [illegible], that life, which he had [illegible] illustrated, and nobly endeared by exertions on his appropriate [element]. That this victory has not [illegible] in every sense, and to the utmost [illegible] is not the fault of Par[liament]. It is not the fault of our gallant [navy]. In every instance, that navy has [done its] duty. Sir, we who are opposed to the War, are still attached to the [honor] and glory of our country.—[We] who have ever been the early and [steady] friends of the navy, rejoice in its [illegible] pre-eminence of character. In this we find some consolation, [illegible] some compensation, [for] the evils and horrors of war. Experience has taught us where we are [illegible], and where, and how Seamen's [rights] can be defended. Sir, I will not [a] moment longer detain the Senate [from] coming to that result, which all the [illegible] of this discussion have so [illegible] indicated with so [illegible] unanimous [assent] to the present proposition.

Governor Strong's Speech.—The [Boston] papers received last evening, [contain] Gov. Strong's Speech at the [opening] of the Legislature of Massachusetts.—We regret that neither our [time] or limits will allow us the pleasure [of giving] this frank and dignified Speech [to] our readers this week.—Alluding to the Embargo law, he says:—

"The late act of the National Government [prohibiting] the trade coastwise, between different parts of the [same] state, as well as between the [states] respectively and with all foreign [nations], contains provisions of such a [nature] as makes it worthy of an in[quiry] whether any measures can be [properly] adopted by this Government [which] would be likely to induce Congress to repeal them, or to amend them [in] such manner as to render their constitutionality less questionable."

[F]ROM WASHINGTON, JAN. 6.

Yesterday Congress appropriated [illegible] millions five hundred thousand dollars for the purposes of the war. The [appropriation was applied] on the [illegible]

[illegible]

Correspondence.—The [illegible] relating to [illegible] of Lord Castlereagh, [illegible] of Lord Cathcart to the Minister of Russia, and the reply of Mr. Monroe to the British Secretary, on the subject of Peace, will be found in this day's Mercury. Our government, it appears, has promptly accepted the proposal of sending Ministers to Gottenburg, to meet Commissioners on the part of Great-Britain. The correspondence is highly honorable to both governments. We have seen letters from Washington, which state, that a Messenger was to go out immediately to Europe with despatches to Messrs. Bayard and Adams, directing them to repair to Gottenburg, to meet the British Commissioners. The general belief at Washington is, that a speedy peace will grow out of the deliberations of the Commissioners.

The satisfaction so generally expressed at the prospect of approaching peace, is the strongest evidence that could be adduced of the disapprobation of the war; which has no doubt been long entertained by the people at large, although, in some, respect for the administration, and a consciousness in others that it could not produce any good effect, has prevented a public expression of the sentiment.

Russian Mediation.—It will be recollected with what assurance the assertion was made, and adhered to with wonderful pertinacity, that the Mediation offered by the Russian Minister was made by him without any instructions from his government.—Many, who made this assertion, were not content with abusing poor Daschkoff, but really appeared to look upon those who expressed the contrary opinion, as willing dupes to the administration. A perusal of Lord Cathcart's apologetical note to the Russian Minister will show which opinion was the most correct.

The recent fluctuations in our market have been without example.—Sugars, three weeks since, sold for 29 dollars, Molasses for 140 cents, and Coffee for 35 cents.—The late arrival from England, has had the effect to lull the rage of Speculation.—During the present week, Sugars have been sold for 18 dollars—Molasses for 75 cents—and Coffee for 23½ cents.——Many have burnt their fingers; and we hope the smart will teach them moderation.

From the New-York Gazette.—Jan. 10.

By the southern prints of the different parties, as well as by private letters, it appears to be the general opinion, that PEACE will result from the negociations about to be entered into between the United States and Great-Britain.

ARMISTICE—It was the opinion in Philadelphia on Saturday, (whether founded on correct information or not we are unable to say) that Admiral WARREN had been instructed by his government, to propose an armistice, in case of our accepting the propositon made by Lord Castlereagh. If this should prove correct, the probability is, that a cessation of hostilities will soon take place.

BOSTON, JAN. 14.

Another Fire at Portsmouth.

On Wednesday evening last, an extensive Rope Walk, in the southerly part of Portsmouth, was destroyed by fire. It belonged to and was improved by Mr. Joseph Akerman, 3d. In it, we hear, was making the cordage for the 74, and some for the Congress; and it contained a great quantity of hemp. The fire is supposed to have been caused by an incendiary, as it appeared in several parts of the building at the same time. Scarcely an article was saved. There had been no fire in the Walk for a fortnight, not even a [lanthorn]. Mr. Akerman is an industrious man, with a young family.

Had not the houses near been covered with snow, and the greatest exertions been used, a considerable conflagration might have been occasioned.

We learn that a dwelling-house belonging to a Mr. Cook, in Troy, Massachusetts, was consumed by fire on Wednesday evening last.

[illegible] Hamburg, it is said, [illegible] and Augereau, [illegible] remnant of the enemy's army [illegible] by Marmont and [illegible] closely pursued by the [illegible] and probably also by the Swedish [illegible] and his Cossacks— [illegible] 50 and 60,000 men are all that [remain] of an army of near[ly] 300,000!! But where is Bonaparte? One report says, he has reached Paris; another that he is gone to Cassel; another, to Magdeburgh. Nothing certain is known relative to him, except that his power has received an irrecoverable blow.

The King of Saxony stood at his balcony, at Liepsic, bowing to the three Sovereigns as they entered, and wishing to be considered as an acquaintance and friend—none saw or spoke to him.

NOV. 10.

Accounts of the most important and favourable kind, were in circulation last night and this morning. It was asserted, that on the 31st Gen. Bluchar, who had been detached in pursuit of the retreating enemy) had come up with them at Cossen, and defeated them, taking a great number of prisoners, and pieces of cannon: That Gen. D'Yorck had pursued another corps of the enemy on the Merseburg road, and routed it with great slaughter.

That the King of Wirtemburg had declared in favour of the Allies, and was marching with 15,000 men to take possession of Frankfort.

That Switzerland had declared in favour of the Allies, and taken up arms.

That the Tyrol having been restored to Austria, the Tyrolians had immediately embodied themselves into a large army, and were descending from their mountains into Italy to take Beauharnais in the rear.

Finally, that Denmark, opening her eyes at length to all the dangers and degradation of her situation, had expressed a wish to be admitted into the alliance against France.

Such were the accounts which obtained considerable credit, probably upon the old adage that "good luck never comes by halves," and "it never rains but it pours."

The Treaties between Great-Britain, Russia, and Prussia, were on Monday evening, laid before Parliament. Russia has stipulated, in the treaty of June the 15th, to bring 160,000 men into the field; and Prussia, in that of June the 14th, to bring 80,000; the money subsidies are in proportion, [illegible]—to Russia, 1,333,334*l*, and to Prussia, 666,666*l*.; besides which the Federative Paper guaranteed by all the three powers, is to be 5 millions sterling, of which 2 1-2 millions are to be ultimately discharged by this country. There is a separate Convention of the 6th of July, for taking the Russian Legion pro tempore, into British pay. These latter troops of course are only to be paid according to their effective strength.

PAMPELUNA IS TAKEN.

The key of N. and W. Spain, was delivered on the 31st Oct. into the hands of the Hero of Vimeira, &c. This most grateful intelligence was brought by Lord Arthur Hill.

The Weser, French frigate, 44 guns, has arrived at Plymouth, prize to the Rippon. The Andromache has captured, off Scilly, the La Trave, French frigate, 44 guns.

It appears by the debates in Parliament, that the restoration of the independence of Holland is an important object of contemplation and design.

Bremen was in possession of the Russians Oct. 26. It had been taken from them by the French on the 23d, and retaken by the Russians the 24th.

REPORTED GREAT NAVAL VICTORY.

Last night we received intelligence from Plymouth, that a Telegraphic Communication had been made from the Admiralty to the Commander in Chief of that Port, announcing that Admiral Young had fallen in with the Enemy, captured TEN SAIL OF THE LINE, and driven TWO on shore.—The gallant Admiral has received two wounds. We suppose that the victory has been obtained over the Texel or Scheldt Fleets, or both combined, as Admiral Young made a signal on Friday

[illegible]

[illegible] of the [illegible] Spanish Language [illegible] Spaniard [illegible] made truly classical, as the late Regulations of the Royal Academy of Madrid with regard to the Orthography and Prosodical Accent have been strictly followed. To Merchants and Captains of vessels, in particular, this production will be of infinite service, as it contains a system of mercantile correspondence, comprising every circumstance or transaction necessary to be known in the trading world.

[☞ By the aid of the above valuable Work, an American can learn the Spanish Language, and a Spaniard can make himself acquainted with the English language, in a few months.]
